

Creativity of Man

There was a time not long ago
When computers were quite rare.
Man would up and explore the world
And he was free of care.

Pen and paper were all Man had
And imagination would run wild
Of pirate ships and dragon's lairs
Creative as a child.

Computers were soon introduced
So beautiful and pristine.
Children came inside to play
And became glued to the screen!

Then came video games
There were so interesting.
With all the graphics on the screen
Outside play was boring.

Now the internet has taken over,
Man can talk across the oceans.
He no longer has time for creativity
Not even stories about potions.

There was a time not long ago
When creativity was rife.
But with all the re-imaginings of tales,
Our ingenuity is in strife!
